Getting reimbursed from your HSA

As someone with an HSA, you might be worried that you’ll need care before you have enough money in your account to pay for your care. But, did you know, if you pay for health care costs out-of-pocket, your HSA can reimburse you for those eligible expenses when you have money in your HSA?

Here’s how it works:

You get care

You pay for your health care expenses out-of-pocket.

To get reimbursed from your HSA, you have two options:

- Take out cash using your HSA debit card.
- Write yourself a check from your HSA.

You pay for your health care expenses with your HSA debit card at the doctor’s office or when you get your bill.

Since you used your debit card, you don’t have to do anything else!
Not enough money in your HSA?

You can pay for health care costs out-of-pocket and reimburse yourself later when you have enough money in your HSA. Don’t forget you can only get reimbursed for eligible health care expenses.

For example:

You go to the doctor to get an MRI in February

- Your cost is $500 dollars, but you only have $100 in your HSA account
- You pay your bill out-of-pocket and save the receipt for your records
- In April you have $500 available in your HSA
- You take out the $500 to pay yourself back

Do you know your plan balances?

Log on to your myHealthPartners account to see how much is left in your HSA and where you’re at with your deductible. You’ll even get cost-saving tips based on your claims.