

Appropriate medications for atrial fibrillation patients that are also at high risk for thromboembolism

The percentage of patients with atrial fibrillation, the most common type of irregular heartbeat, that are also at high risk for thromboembolism (blood clots that break free and could lodge in other parts of the body) that are currently taking appropriate medications.

